>> Human Research Application for IRB Approval

Reference Id: Search

Welcome to IRBIS, the IRB Information System. The system is designed to be used for all of your interactions with the IRB. Here you can create new applications, modify or update approved studies and view the status of pending submissions. After you select the relevant action from the left hand column, you will be prompted to provide the information needed to complete your submission, including consent forms, as relevant. Your application will be customized to fit the circumstances of your research, depending on your responses as you proceed. The questions are designed to be answered in a sequential order; however, you may use the links in the left column to revisit any portion of the application. Once you have provided the necessary information, your submission will be electronically certified by the principal investigator, routed for department level approvals (when indicated) and then received by the IRB.

- Review Approving Department's comments.
- Revise your online application by accessing the relevant sections via the Item List.
- Resubmit.

Notes:

- If one of your approving departments rejects your submission before a second department has reviewed it, the second department is notified by email to expect a revision.
- A revised submission is re-routed to the rejecting department AND to any department that has yet to approve or reject.
- A revised submission is NOT re-routed to a department that has already approved.
- The investigator is not required to recertify before resubmission.
